○ Summary

My work experience during the years has been diverse, which I in later years has found fulfilling when it comes to adapting to new situations. As a person I would call my self outgoing, a good communicator and a team player. Ever since I first deleted all my dads important files from his first computer to install Linux on it, computers have always been my main interested. I see myself as a creative person which then makes me a good problem solver. In my working years this far, I would say that problem solving has been the quality most substantial to me.
